WHAT TO DO WHEN A DEATH OCCURS

- When a death certificate has been issued by the doctor it must be shown to the Registrar who will record the death.

ARRANGING THE FUNERAL

- Check to see if there are any instructions by the deceased. If not, it is up to the nearest relative to decide on a burial or cremation. Requests made by the person need not always be followed but if the will states the person does not want to be cremated it must be obeyed.
- The service does not have to be religious and relatives can design their own type of tribute.
- Decisions have to be made if flowers are wanted or whether donations should be made to a named charity.

CREMATION

- No one can be cremated until the cause of the death is definitely known.
- Funeral directors will make arrangements for the completion of all the necessary documents.
- Ashes can be kept, scattered in a garden of remembrance or favourite spot, buried in a churchyard or cemetery.

BURIAL

- Find out if the person who died had already arranged a grave space in a churchyard or cemetery by checking through the will and looking at their papers.
- The Church of England has set fees for a funeral service and burial and for the erection of a headstone. Extra fees include an organist, choir and the burial of someone who did not live in the parish. Many town churchyards are no longer open for burial due to lack of space.
- Cemeteries will change a deed of grant if a grave space had already been paid for. Fees can vary if the cemetery is owned by a local authority or a private company.
